Forecast For Northern Ireland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Thursday 30 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mostly fine, dry, occasionally bright and seasonally mild.

Today:
The vast majority staying dry with the best of brighter spells through the morning. Mild with moderate southwest breezes. However some showers may appear around northern coasts early morning and cloud will tend to thicken from the south through afternoon. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Tonight:
Overcast with a area of occasionally heavy rain soon sweeping into southern areas early evening, which reaches all before midnight. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Friday:
Overcast at first with occasional rain. Turning drier from the west late morning, leading to a largerly dry and increasing bright afternoon, with mild temperatures again and and easing winds. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Saturday mild, but not feeling so in brisk winds that bring showers or longer periods of rain. Sunshine, showers for Sunday. Rain then showers Monday, these perhaps wintry later.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.